PROFESSIONAL REPORTS AND DOCUMENTS

Author/co-author of 57 professional archaeological reports (Phase I, II, and III) and related documents between 1990 and 2002. A comprehensive list is available upon request.

TEACHING EXPERIENCE

COURSES TAUGHT AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MISSISSIPPI (2003-PRESENT):

- Anthropology 101: Introductory Cultural Anthropology. An introduction to the anthropological study of culture, including ethnology and linguistic anthropology.
- Anthropology 101: Introduction to Anthropology. In 2013-2014, Anthropology 101 was reorganized as a four-field introduction to anthropology.
- Anthropology 305: Archaeology. An introduction to the intellectual process of archaeology focusing on research process, analytical methods, professional standards, critical thinking, and problem solving; required for the BA in anthropology.
- Anthropology 306: Archaeology of the Ancient Celts. An introduction to the archaeology of later prehistoric Europe (Bronze and Iron ages) and to the relationship between archaeology, history, and ethnic identity.
- Anthropology 408: Laboratory Methods in Archaeology. An introduction to materials analysis with an emphasis on chipped stone and ceramic objects from excavated contexts in Mississippi.
- Anthropology 507: The Archaeology of Landscape. A seminar exploration of space, place, and landscape in the development of archaeology with an emphasis on diverse perspectives in contemporary post-modern approaches.
- Anthropology 541: Independent Study.
- Anthropology 621: Readings in European Prehistory. Intensive reading and writing courses for graduate students preparing for Masters work; each course is tailored to individual student needs.
- Geography 101: Introduction to Geography. An introduction to themes, concepts, and methods of geography, including physical geography, human and cultural geography, and analytical geography.
- International Studies 421. Undergraduate senior thesis mentoring in Croft Institute for International Studies.
- LIBA 102, Freshman Seminar: Perceptions of the Past: Archaeology in the Public Eye. Students consider the relationships between scientific knowledge and popular conceptions of archaeology and past societies.
- LIBA 102, Freshman Seminar: Celts, National Identity, and Cultural Constructions. An exploration of the nature of ethnic identity and the role of archaeological, historical, and ethnographic data in the study of “Celtic” populations.

OTHER TEACHING EXPERIENCE:

- Anthropology 485: The Archaeology of Later Prehistoric Europe, Mankato State University, Mankato, MN (Spring 1993). A seminar-level examination of Bronze and Iron Age Europe with an emphasis on issues of socio-political development, material culture and social reproduction, economic systems, ritual behavior and long-term cultural change.
- Anthropology 126: Archaeology, Normandale Community College, Bloomington, MN (Spring 1989). An introduction to the practice of anthropological and critical archaeology and the use of material culture to investigate cultural phenomena.
- Curator and Head Teaching Fellow for Anthropology 100: An Introduction to Archaeology at Harvard College, Cambridge, MA with Professor C.C. Lamberg-Karlovsky and Dr.

Richard Meadow (Fall 1988). Responsible for the design of course content, archaeological laboratories, and the use of Peabody Museum collections as teaching aids.

- Teaching Fellow for Anthropology 100: An Introduction to Archaeology at Harvard College with Professor C.C. Lamberg-Karlovsky and Dr. Richard Meadow (Spring 1987 and 1988).
- Teaching Fellow for Anthropology 139: Fantastic Archaeology at Harvard College with Professor Stephen Williams (Fall 1986). A comparison of pseudo-scientific research and the scientific method in archaeology and anthropology.
- Teaching Fellow for two discussion sections in the Harvard Core course, Social Analysis 20: Clash of Cultures, at Harvard College with Professor Peter Wells (Spring 1986). An introduction to principles of socio-cultural analysis and the dynamics of culture contact and change, integrating prehistoric, historic, and modern case studies.
